

AFRICA EVANGELICAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

(AEPC)

A Brief History

The Beginning (1946–1962)

The Africa Evangelical Presbyterian Church (AEPC) traces its roots to 1946 when Presbyterian missionaries Rev. Sanders Campbell and his wife arrived in Kenya and began ministry in the Mwingi and Kitui regions. Through faithful preaching, Bible teaching, and evangelism, many people came to faith in Jesus Christ. Additional missionaries joined the work, helping to establish churches and train local leaders.

Formation of AEPC (1962)

In 1962, the Africa Evangelical Presbyterian Church was formally established as an independent Presbyterian denomination in Kenya. From its beginning, the church committed itself to the authority of God's Word, Reformed theology, Presbyterian church government, evangelism, discipleship, and leadership training.

Growth Across Kenya (1962–1998)

Initially centered in Eastern Kenya, the church expanded steadily into Nairobi, Kiambu, Meru, Embu, Nakuru, Mombasa, and other regions. Bible colleges and training institutions were established to equip pastors, elders, and evangelists for ministry.

Full Independence (1998)

In 1998, the church became fully self-governing and self-supporting as foreign missionaries gradually withdrew from direct leadership. Kenyan pastors and elders assumed responsibility for church leadership, evangelism, mission work, theological education, and church planting.

Expansion Beyond Kenya

As the church matured, it embraced Christ's Great Commission by extending ministry beyond Kenya. Mission work led to the establishment of a Presbytery in Zimbabwe, churches in the Democratic Republic of Congo, and ongoing outreach throughout East Africa.
